WHAT IS THE TENNESSEE VALLEY CORRIDOR?

The Tennessee Valley Corridor was organized in 1995 based on the ideas of former Tennessee Governor, now U.S. Senator Lamar Alexander, and former Tennessee Congressman Zach Wamp. In the 1980s, Governor Alexander had a vision to create an "Oak Ridge Corridor" to link the Department of Energy facilities in Oak Ridge, the Tennessee Valley Authority and the University of Tennessee to showcase the wealth of brainpower in the mid-East Tennessee region. In 1995 former Congressman Wamp founded an annual Science & Technology Summit to convene representatives from government, academia and business to collaborate on ways to bring greater attention to the economic impact of the Department of Energy missions in Oak Ridge.

These two complimentary ideas of a "Corridor and Summit" merged and resulted in the creation of a 501-c-6 organization, the Tennessee Valley Corridor (TVC), that now represents a footprint of 12 congressional districts in Tennessee, Alabama, Kentucky, Virginia and North Carolina. Through the leadership of its 35-member board of directors, the TVC convenes an annual National Summit, promotes initiatives to advance the TVC's mission and to encourage on-going collaboration in energy, science, environment, space, national security and education.

HOW CAN YOU GET INVOLVED WITH THE TVC?

TVC SUMMIT

The TVC Summit is one of the Southeast's longest running science and technology conferences. TVC Summits have been held in the Tri Cities (TN/VA), Oak Ridge/ Knoxville, Huntsville, Asheville, Nashville, Chattanooga, Tullahoma, Murfreesboro, Cookeville, Washington, D.C. and Somerset.

Each May, more than 300 government, business, academic and community leaders from the TVC's five-state region come together to interact with members of the TVC Congressional Caucus, government officials, major federal contractors, and college and university leaders. During the two-day event partnerships and business development opportunities are developed, ideas shared and useful connections are established.
